

Where is Hyaluronic Acid found in the body?

Skin

Young skin is smooth and elastic and contains large amounts of HA that helps keep the skin looking young and healthy. With age, the ability of the skin to produce HA decreases, leaving the skin unhealthy and wrinkled. Hyaluronic Acid acts as a space filler by binding to water and thus keeping the skin wrinkle-free.

Scalp Tissue and Hair Follicles

The dermal layer is composed of connective tissue with gelatinous fluid-like characteristics and the presence of HA that provides support, nourishes and hydrates the deep layers of the scalp. The result is healthy, lustrous hair and a moisturized scalp.

Joints

Hyaluronic Acid is found in all joints, bones and cartilage structures throughout the body.

Tendons and Ligaments/Connective Tissue

Connective tissue is found everywhere in the body. Its major functions include binding, supporting, protecting, insulating and connecting bones to muscle (tendons) and bone to bone (ligaments). All of this is made possible because of the presence of the HA and its ability to form the gelatinous ground substance fluid.

Eyes

The fluid inside the eye, called the vitreous humor, is composed almost completely of Hyaluronic Acid. The HA gives the fluid inside the eye a viscous, gel-like property. This gel acts as a shock absorber for the eye and also serves to transport nutrients into the eye.
